In Opposition.

LEANNE CHIN to natboards 08/04/2010 12:43 AM

Dear Sir / Madam,

It has been brought to my attention with great urgency that the Board is considering to regulate/dictate the way in which we in the Profession choose to practice.

I personally feel that this is a great misuse of funds and administrative hours, such efforts could best be allocated to the promotion and support of the profession in the community. Those who have been found guilty of professional misconduct treated accordingly without generalising the majority for the misjudgement of the few.

Is the Boards function to protect it's registrants from the ill informed, uneducated, and of false practice. Is it not to monitor those in the community who assume or use the title 'Chiropractor' inappropriately? Investigate to the best of it's capacity any fraudulant behaviour? To question those who manipulate under the guise of Chiropractic and stain/tarnish the professions reputation?

How I choose to apply the art, skill and philosophy of Chiropractic is particular to me and I specifically serve my client base who search me out independantly or by specific referral. How I apply Chiropractic is in accordance with the strong belief I have in the philosophy and strength of those before me. I refuse to be overseen by those who possibly have had little time in active practice and hold little regard for the holistic care that we as Chiropractors are able to offer the community. I am confident that my collegues assess and examine each case and set a care programe accordingly.

I pride myself being associated in a profession that trusts in the healing capacity of the innate however I feel that there is evidence of dilution of our true essence / philosophy in the wellness industry. This is backed by this apparent move to monitor our every action in order to satify the egoic fear that the medico-science component has elicited. I refuse to 'process' my clients in order to satisfy an impersonal financially driven procedural based practice. This is what will have us hidden in the medical web of confusion and illusion - that 'we heal' the patient - back to reality!!!!!

The Board cannot aspire to such nonsense and has lost touch with it's registrants and it's proper task of ensuring the highest quality professional is exquisitly trained and able to provide the best primary contact care possible. Ask and an answer will surely be given, notice of such action was received through collegues and I received NO DIRECT correspondence from the Board of it's intention to act as big brother rather than our collective voice.

I have been in practice coming on 20yrs and now realise I'm one of the 'old guys'. It's a profession and practice I am still passionate about and love. To those who are in the Chiropractic business for the kudos or anything other than giving our clients the knowing that they can heal themselves - we only allow full expression of human potential by removing neural obstruction. The Board cannot personify 'the subluxation' and obstruct the global dissemination of wellness from within, the board must abort this cancerous idea and use it's influence to engage, motivate and unify the profession - not destroy it from the inside out!!!!!!

Seriously consider the outcome of your actions.