Subject: Fw: Submission Professional Code of Conduct

Chair,

After reveiwing the second attempt at a code of conduct for the chiropractic profession I still hold grave reservations and do not know how that document intends to achieve its stated aims. It does not simplify anything, is over dogmatic and proscriptive, refers to documents outside itself (and those documents may be changed arbitrarily). It is also still contradictory and vague; able to be manipulated in any way the powers that be decide.

A far better approach would be the osteopaths' code of professional conduct - its only 2 pages long, says all we want to in our present abominable draft - all we need to do is change "osteopath" to "chiropractor" and its done. Their code is respectful, upbeat, allows for a variety or practice styles while still maintaining standards and a professional level of care.
